This annotated digital catalogue offers a systematic presentation of the appeals to the Privy Council from the British Caribbean and Canadian colonies to 1783, with links to related documents. By the dawn of the eighteenth century, the power of the Privy Council as advisor to the sovereign was already waning. Nonetheless, the Council and its associated subsidiaries retained responsibility for the administration of the growing number of English colonies. As part of this oversight of colonial governance, the Council exercised appellate jurisdiction over the decisions of the highest courts in each colony. The purpose of the catalogue is to provide a foundation for further study of these appeals through improved access to the source material.

The catalogue contains 519 reports on appeals, listing all the known appeals in this period. Each report gives: the colony from which the case was appealed; full and short name of the appeal as compiled from the entries in the 'Acts of the Privy Council, Colonial Series' (APC); the names and dates of lower court actions; the names of participants; the subject matter and disposition of the case; and more. Accompanying lists include case names and parties to the cases, vessels, surviving printed cases, counsel, and references in the cases to enslaved persons and to plantations or land. The printed catalog is accompanied by a website (<https://amesfoundation.law.harvard.edu/ColonialAppeals/CaribAppeals/>) that provides links to original documents and a comprehensive index of persons.

PREFACE

THIS volume continues the Ames Foundation's series of volumes independent of the Year Books of Richard II. We have recently converted this series into an "e-series," in which an online electronic book in PDF format accompanies the publication in traditional paper format.

The second volume in the e-series, published in 2014, was Sharon Hamby O'Connor's and Mary Bilder's Appeals to the Privy Council from the American Colonies: An Annotated Digital Catalogue, which is now called "Part 1." It catalogued all the known appeals to the Privy Council prior to 1783 from the thirteen colonies that ultimately became the United States. That catalogue listed (pp. 538–637 in the printed edition) all the then-known appeals from the Canadian and Caribbean colonies in the same period and gave some indication of where records concerning them might be found. It was already apparent from that list that there were considerably more appeals from these colonies, notably from the Caribbean, than there were from the thirteen pre-U.S. colonies and that they deserved that same kind of attention as that paid to the thirteen pre-U.S. colonies in Part 1.

That attention has resulted in this volume. It supersedes what is contained in Part 1 about the Canadian and Caribbean appeals. Like Part 1, it contains in printed form the reports of the appeals that appear on the website (<https://amesfoundation.law.harvard.edu/ColonialAppeals/CaribAppeals/index.php>), 519 reports as opposed to 257 in Part 1. It also contains all of the "useful lists" that are included in Part 2 of the website. It has not been possible to include the elaborate Index of Persons that accompanies Part 2 on the website, although its URL is provided with a brief description of how to use it. The names of the parties to the cases may be found in the list of case names, those of counsel on the printed case in the list of counsel, those of vessels in the list of vessels. There is a new list of all the cases that refer to enslaved persons (both Parts 1 and 2) and another of references to plantations or land (Part 2 only).

The compilers wrote an Introduction that covers both Parts. It is included here and replaces the Introduction that appeared in Part 1. Similarly, the Bibliography is combined. It covers both Parts and replaces the one that appeared in Part 1. As was the case with the printed edition of Part 1, this volume refers to, but does not include, the images of the ancillary records that are found on the website. These images include: the printed Acts of the Privy Council, Colonial Series; the manuscript registers of the Privy Council; the “printed cases” of counsel, where found; and miscellaneous documents relating to the appeal found in The National Archives (U.K.) and elsewhere.

The normal list of acknowledgements that are found at this point in Ames publications is found in this one at the end of the Introduction. Suffice it to say here that the Foundation is also grateful to all of the institutions and people who helped with this project. It is also grateful to Professors O’Connor and Bilder not only for the extraordinary effort that they put into this project over the course of almost fifteen years but also for having gently guided the Foundation into areas of legal history and methods of publication new to it, while at the same time keeping the Foundation true to its mission of making original source-material in legal history available to a wider public.

Overview

This annotated digital catalogue offers a systematic presentation of the appeals to the Privy Council from the 13 colonies that became the United States (Part 1) and from the British Caribbean and Canadian colonies (Part 2) to 1783, with links to related documents. By the dawn of the eighteenth century, the power of the Privy Council as advisor to the sovereign was already waning. Nonetheless, the Council and its associated subsidiaries retained responsibility for the administration of the growing number of English colonies. As part of this oversight of colonial governance, the Council exercised appellate jurisdiction over the decisions of the highest courts in each colony.

The purpose of the catalogue is to provide a foundation for further study of these appeals through improved access to source material. The two parts contain 776 reports on appeals, 257 reports in Part 1, 519 in Part 2.¹ The total number of appeals (more than 850), however, is higher than the number of reports, as cross appeals and related appeals are included in one report.

To date, the American appeals (Part 1) have been the study of more scholarship than those in the Caribbean and Canada (Part 2). We hope that the two parts will encourage new scholarship. Even at a glance, the people represented by the process include familiar names. On the American side, George Washington's marriage to Martha (Dandridge) Custis introduced him to the complicated litigation between his stepchildren's father's family and Lucy Chester Parke, acknowledged natural daughter of Governor Daniel Parke of the Leeward Islands.² The origins of the controversial wealth of Isaac Royall (Royal), Jr., which funded the first law professorship at Harvard College, has its origins in his father's Caribbean economic activities, reflected here in a 1738 appeal.³ On the British side, Christopher Codrington, Governor of the Leeward Islands, whose endowment created the majestic Codrington Library of All Souls College, appears in several appeals.⁴ Indeed, there are a rather large number of "repeat players" particularly in the Caribbean cases.⁵ Behind the names and properties lies the expansion and exploitation that characterized the history of British colonization and the concomitant wealth that flowed into British family fortunes over the eighteenth century.

The two parts encompass over a century of appeals. The earliest appeal in either part is Capt. John Rodney v Thomas Cole (NEV_1674_00).⁶ After 1674, appeals gradually spread across the colonies: Jamaica (1679), New York (1680), Massachusetts (1681), Barbados and Virginia (1682), New Hampshire (1683), Antigua and Bermuda (1689), Maryland (1694), New Jersey (1696), Rhode Island (1698), Connecticut and South Carolina (1699). In 1696, the Lords Commissioners of Trade and Plantations (commonly called the "Board of Trade") was established, leading to a considerable increase in appeals. Canadian appeals begin in 1758, with the first appeal from Nova Scotia, followed by Newfoundland (1761) and Quebec

⁶ https://amesfoundation.law.harvard.edu/ColonialAppeals/CaribAppeals/report_carib_mysqli.php?report_no=NEV_1674_00. Smith, p.69, describes this appeal as "the initial case in which a genuine appeal can be said to be found."

Modern appellate courts in many countries trace their roots to these appeals. As British imperial administrative authority devolved and disintegrated, the practice of appealing continued to new or transformed institutions. In the United States, the Supreme Court became the successor to this appellate jurisdiction in 1789. With respect to Canada and the Caribbean, a committee of the Privy Council continued to exercise appellate jurisdiction for a considerable period. In 1833, a distinct Judicial Committee of the Privy Council (JCPC) was created by statute. The current JCPC continues to operate pursuant to that statute and successive alterations. Jurisdiction over Canada ended in 1949 and the Supreme Court of Canada became the highest appellate jurisdiction. Currently, jurisdiction over appeals from Caribbean countries differs. The JCPC continues to serve as an appellate body for some, and for others, the Caribbean Court of Justice, inaugurated in 2005, now serves as the appellate body. Today, the JCPC hears appeals in the same building as the UK Supreme Court, in Parliament Square, Westminster.

Although the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council became the official name of the appellate body after 1833, for the previous century and half, we can refer to it as the Committee for Hearing Appeals. During the period covered by this catalogue, the appellate body operated as a committee of the Privy Council, its attendance varying in number and composition with various names used to describe it.⁷ The Committee met at Whitehall, usually in a room designated as “at the Council Chamber” or “at the Cockpit.”

This catalogue complements other ongoing international efforts to uncover the record of appeals within the colonies of the British Empire. Current complementary international projects include the previously unpublished Privy Council Papers

1792–1998)⁸ and colonial appeals from India⁹ and Australia.¹⁰ The British Library maintains an updated collection guide for “Judicial Committee of the Privy Council appeal cases.”¹¹ The total number of cases, including the approximately 10,000 cases of the Privy Council Papers digital catalogue, demonstrates the significance of this jurisdiction over more than three centuries.

A few gaps remain in the documentary record tracing the transition from 1783 to the modern era. On the British side, appellate records between 1784–1792 remain undocumented for Caribbean and Canadian appeals. On the U.S. side, several appellate bodies operated between 1776 and 1790. Two were related to prize appeals: the Committee on Prize Appeals (1776–1780) and the Court of Appeals in Cases of Capture (1780–1787), both of which heard prize appeals from admiralty courts in the states. Of the nearly 120 cases heard, some records are accessible as digitized microfilm¹² and some records of opinions appear in volume 2 of the United States Reports (Dallas).¹³ In addition, under Article 9 of the Articles of Confederation (1781), the United States in Congress assembled became the last resort on appeal in any disputes between states. These records remain scattered.

For a further overview of the Council’s appellate jurisdiction and its significance, see Sharon Hamby O’Connor and Mary Sarah Bilder’s “Appeals to the Privy Council before American Independence: An Annotated Digital Catalogue.”¹⁴ To date, the most exhaustive study of the appellate process remains undoubtedly Joseph H. Smith’s Appeals to the Privy Council from the American Plantations, images of which are available on this site.¹⁵ A number of other studies have provided detailed discussion of more particular aspects.¹⁶ For an understanding of the process itself, see the brief description in Bilder's Transatlantic Constitution.¹⁷

A word about Smith's Appeals to the Privy Council may be helpful to researchers. Smith studied the institutional development of the hearing of colonial appeals, and he viewed appeals as an institution. He traced a trajectory from conciliar jurisdiction over the Channel Islands that had begun in the medieval period to appeals in the 1760s and 1770s which raised implicit constitutional questions analogous to judicial review of legislation. Working primarily from the Acts of the Privy Council, Colonial Series and Privy Council records, Smith identified appeals and then apparently created a categorization system in which appeals presented examples of particular procedural or institutional development. Impressively, Smith located significant printed and manuscript materials related to many of the appeals. Smith's interest, however, usually involved abstract legal process issues. Although focused on conciliar jurisdiction, Smith evaluated the appeals through a lens constructed by the American judicial example. And similarly, despite claiming to appreciate the "lack of definition of its objectives and the plasticity of the methods whereby it reaches its unguessed destination" (p. 351), Smith repeatedly analyzed and evaluated the appeals against some abstract idea of what a coherent, conciliar appellate jurisdiction should have resembled. As he noted, his conclusions were "belated rationalization, and although based on the practice may not correctly reflect the eighteenth-century opinion" (p. 523). Therefore, Smith's book is most usefully consulted for material relating to procedural or technical matters; the location of source material related to particular appeals; and the background for appeals of contemporaneous political significance.

Reflections on Colonial Appeals

After almost fifteen years of working on the Appeals digital catalogues, we offer brief reflections on three aspects of the appeals from the American colonies. Although the appeals touch on many facets of the British Atlantic world, we want to draw scholarly attention especially to their relationship to eighteenth-century British law; slavery and race; and women, property, and gender. As future scholarship involving the appeals begins to respond to these reflections – and to many other unaddressed issues – we hope that scholars will bring such research to our attention.

Colonial Legal Culture and the Empire. For the colony of New York, note also the recent work of Daniel Hulsebosch, Constituting Empire: New York and the Transformation of Constitutionalism in the Atlantic World, 1664–1830. Work on the topic continues to appear as scholars explore this era. See, for example, Craig Yirush's article "Claiming the New World: Empire, Law, and Indigenous Rights in the Mohegan Case, 1704–1743," and Arthur Mitchell Fraas's dissertation: "They Have Travailed Into a Wrong Latitude": The Laws of England, Indian Settlements, and the British Imperial Constitution 1726–1773. For Canada and a somewhat later period, see Catharine MacMillan, "Empire's Law: Archives and the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council."

1. British Law

The types of legal arguments raised on appeal, the style of arguing before the Committee, and the permitted outcomes differed from approaches in conventional British courts. The colonial appeals jurisdiction is likely in some part responsible for the extraordinary development of late eighteenth-century English law. The flexibility that arose from an appellate process seemingly unbound by the restrictions of printed and manuscript case reports requires further evaluation and study. In constructing the argument, the printed cases reflect a style of legal argument less bound to printed case precedent and more interested in reasons. The absence of formal and informal reports – indeed, the apparent absence of any record of precedent – permitted flexibility and change. A few instances can be found where legal questions raised in appeals shifted into the regular law courts;¹⁸ however, personnel mingled between the appeals committee and the law courts. The Chief Justices and Chancellor often sat as part of the committee to hear appeals. For example, Philip Yorke appeared as counsel and also heard appeals as a member of the Privy Council following his appointment as chief justice of King's Bench and then chancellor. What was the relationship between the law and legal principles as argued in the reasons in the printed case of appeals and as argued in King's Bench, Common Pleas, Exchequer, and the House of Lords? How did the appeals affect the development of English law?

The list of counsel makes apparent that legal luminaries of the eighteenth-century common law spent years arguing colonial appeals.¹⁹ The printed cases list numerous names – some familiar and others completely unknown. The vast majority of printed cases reflect the collections of Charles and Philip Yorke, Sir George Lee, and William Samuel Johnson. Two counsel loom large among our printed cases: Charles Yorke and Alexander Forrester. Nonetheless, Sir Dudley Ryder, William Murray (later Lord Mansfield), Fletcher Norton, William de Grey, Alexander Hume-Campbell, Charles Pratt, and Alexander Wedderburn argued numerous appeals. How did arguing the appeals affect the legal thought of the British counsel who argued the American appeals, as well as Irish and Scottish appeals in the House of Lords, and before the law courts? Did this experience affect the legal thought of those, like Lord Mansfield, who went on to serve on the bench?

We know little, however, about how counsel were introduced and indoctrinated into the appeals practice and what supporting personnel in London and the colonies worked with them. We continue to be uncertain about the production of the printed cases. We suspect that printed cases were filed in many appeals that went to a hearing before the committee by the mid-eighteenth century. The earliest printed case that we have located is a two-page printed case in Mingham v Martin (JAM_1680_00).²⁰ The respondent's case is handwritten and labeled, "In Answer to Capt. Mingham's printed case," and the minutes of the Council of Jamaica of November 5, 1680 include references to it.²¹ Mingham is a considerable outlier; the next printed case located is Mendez v Battyn (BAR_1714_04),²² followed by Forward v Poulson (Maryland, 04_1720_00).²³ By the 1730s, printed cases seem increasingly routine.

The dispositions of the appeals offer no rationales. In the absence of printed or manuscript reports, the printed cases provide the best window into the arguments before the Appeals Committee. The 161 reports in the two parts (Part 1, 54; Part 2, 107)²⁴ that contain printed cases likely reflect only a portion of the original number of printed cases drafted and printed for committee hearings. We continue to hope that additional printed cases will be located.

The participants in the appeals process had authority in other areas of British government. The appeals offered a certain perspective on the issues that arose from the increasingly widespread and diverse British empire. How did the appeals from the colonies alter the view of the expanding empire held by the counsel, politicians, and judges? What was the relationship between appeals from the American colonies and the appeals from Scotland, Ireland, and eventually India? How did the dominance of Jamaican and Barbadian appeals affect English law and transatlantic colonial constitutional law? How did the relatively late development of appeals from Canada (Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, and Quebec) help to structure the expansion of British authority?

The relationship between the appeals and colonial law remains largely unknown. We did not have the resources to link the appeals to extant case files, legal materials, and court records relating to the action as it unfolded in the colony. Here again, we can only ask questions. At the specific colony level, did the outcome of particular appeals affect local legislative or executive decisions, or have formal or informal precedential value? Did the outcome of particular appeals or the discussion at the hearing of the appeal affect other colonial legal systems? Colonial legislatures were influenced by other colonial statutes. Was there any similar influence with respect to issues raised by appeals? How was knowledge about appeals transmitted? Did the appeals affect Parliamentary legislation or Privy Council gubernatorial orders? How did the appeals relate to the related process of review and disallowance of colonial statutes? Did the appeals further the sense of a uniform colonial world or of a radically diverse one? Did the appeals nurture or define the colonial bars in colonies with robust appeals practices?

Lastly, the relationship between the appeals, British law, and socio-economic factors also requires further study. For example, over two hundred appeals from Jamaica are noted in the Privy Council's registers and over one hundred from Barbados. These numbers far surpass the three highest continental colonies (Rhode Island, Virginia, and Massachusetts). The nature of British settlement in the Caribbean explains some factors underlying the difference. For example, the frequency of death due to the climate and previously non-encountered diseases was a constant complexity in the appeals. Deaths led to replacement of parties, dismissals, and revivals. We made no statistical study, but our impression is that the Caribbean appeals experienced the effect of death more often than the continental appeals. Relatedly, the white British occupants of the Caribbean colonies often had no plans to remain permanently in the Caribbean. Participants in appeals moved back and forth across the Atlantic and family struggles might involve English-based branches against Caribbean-based branches. Jamaica and Barbados may have the highest number of appeals in part because English participants had easy connections to London. The size of the economy undoubtedly also was a factor. Many Caribbean colonies have only a handful of appeals and several have only one. But additional conclusions will have to await further research.

2. Slavery and Race

The appeals indicate the omnipresence of enslaved labor at the center of the long eighteenth-century British economy and the casual acceptance of legalized race-based slavery by British legal participants. Across the American colonies – continental and Caribbean – the appeals reflected the reality of a British law of slavery.

The appeals jurisdiction literally segregated cases relating to British slavery to a jurisdictional area apart from reported English law. Just as the Atlantic served to keep slavery off-shore in the Caribbean and North American colonies, so too the appeals jurisdiction permitted leading British lawyers and judges to avoid having English law directly enabling slavery. Nevertheless, in arguing and hearing appeals at Whitehall, appeals counsel and the Privy Council repeatedly confronted the ubiquitous reality of slavery across the eighteenth-century British empire. The occasional and sporadic decisions that seemed to limit slavery within English common law need to be reinterpreted against the persistent willingness of English legal decision-makers to accommodate the expansion of slavery abroad.

Through the appeals process, determinations relating to slavery in any particular colony were potentially subject to appellate review in London. In this sense, there was an inchoate British law of slavery but one that was never written about in a case report or enacted as a colonial statute. But here again, we must await future scholarship. Did the Appeals committee strive for coherence across Caribbean and continental jurisdictions? How did the appeals address the ubiquitous issue of whether enslaved people were categorized by legal systems as real or personal property? Was there a relationship between the appeals decisions and colonial statute law?

Petitions, printed cases, and committee reports repeatedly mention enslaved people in lists categorizing them as property. These references represent a fraction of the larger number of enslaved people who were embodied in descriptions of various plantations or estate wealth. In a small percentage of the appeals, enslaved people appeared as the legal issue or otherwise caught the APC abstractors' attention such that they were listed in the abstract. We have listed those specific appeals in the Useful List, References to Enslaved Persons in Parts I (online version only) and II.²⁵ The relatively short lists should not mislead researchers: they represent only the few appeals where the APC abstract mentions enslaved people – simply clicking on the related papers or printed cases brings to light many additional ones, never mind independent historical investigation of the parties involved, e.g., Chandos v Fearon (JAM_1783_01). The underlying legal issue in other appeals related to slavery, and a far larger number involved the application of British law to land or commercial enterprises dependent on or intertwined with enslaved labor.

For many white British litigants, the Caribbean represented vast new economic wealth and an opportunity to attain a higher level in the traditionally rigid social hierarchy. As Simon Gikandi argues in Slavery and the Culture of Taste, the wealth from Caribbean exploitation and enslavement enabled much of eighteenth-century British culture.²⁶ The appeals cast light on a number of estates and slave-owning families identified in the website Legacies of British Slave-ownership.²⁷ As a first step in helping scholars connect the appeals to British slave-owning families, we include a Useful List of named plantations and parcels of land. As with the Useful List of enslaved persons, the list incorporates only appeals in which the abstract mentioned the plantation by name or identified a parcel.²⁸

The appeals also offer insight into the relationship between race and civil status, at least in terms of the capacity to use the process to protect wealth and property. In almost every instance, the litigating participants were white. Some of the appeals in Part 1 and Part 2 involve participants whose names or biography indicate that they were Jewish, often of Sephardic origins.²⁹ As Jewish individuals often were barred from the same civil rights as the British, additional research may be useful in delineating their status within the appeals process. Nationalities other than British also appear as participants.³⁰

With respect to tribal members, although the Privy Council dealt with numerous controversies involving Indian Nations, one appeal of which we are aware is the 1755 appeal of Thomas Ninigret, the sachem of the Narraganset, listed in Part 1 from Rhode Island.³¹ A second matter, which does not appear in Part 1, is the lengthy controversy between the Mohegans and the colony of Connecticut, which may be regarded as a unique form of appeal. Extensive significant scholarship exists on this controversy, including in Joseph Smith. Early procedural hearings in the matter took the form of royal commissions, and in 1772 there was a hearing before the Privy Council; printed cases exist.³²

At least one appeal adjudicated the status and property rights of mixed-race individuals. In 1780, the appeal from Jamaica in Parkinson v Parkinson (JAM_1780_02) involved issues arising from the estate of George Williams. Williams was owner of the Moreland estate and 239 enslaved individuals.³³ After his death, the Jamaican Attorney General claimed his property for the crown on the ground that Williams was a bastard who had no lawful heirs, and that therefore his property escheated. That Williams was a bastard seems to have been conceded, although the facts that led to that conclusion are not known, in particular whether Williams was born to white parents or was himself mixed race. At his death, his will left his property to his natural sons and daughters by Fanny Douglas, an enslaved woman, and Quasheba Douglas, an enslaved woman. The will, however, was said to be invalid because it left more to the mixed-race children than was authorized under a Jamaica statute. After considerable argument, the Jamaica court held the will invalid, and the Privy Council affirmed.

3. Women, Property, and Gender

Women are often invisible as historical participants in appeals. The classic et uxor or et ux. (“and wife”) to describe female legal interests converted individual women into an abstract “wife.” The conventional approach to rendering case names by last name only similarly erases female participation from appeals. In Part 2, we have listed the appeals on the Contents pages with full names. In Part 1 the Contents pages use the short form, but the long form may be found in one of the Useful Lists.³⁴ A glance at the list of Caribbean appeals reveals the significant number of female litigants. Women appear as wives, daughters, sisters, guardians – and, quite often, representing their own individual interests. As wives, women’s interests could relate to dower (their right through marriage) or to their own inheritances.³⁵

Discerning women’s agency in bringing or maintaining appeals is not easy. Men were the only ones permitted to serve as lawyers and draft legal documents. Nonetheless, it may be that, as in Rhode Island, the Caribbean appeals reflect female legal knowledge acquired through family connections or by the advantages of a small community.³⁶ The appeals thus raise the questions: how did women use the appeals system to obtain property and financial security, and how did they interact with the London legal profession and local attorneys?

Race and gender intersect in these appeals. Repeatedly, particularly in the Caribbean, the property that white women were seeking to protect or gain involved enslaved people. How did white women use the appeals process to further their interests as owners of enslaved people? How did the English and continental and Caribbean legal systems configure white women’s property interests and slavery?

Importantly, the list of appeals presented in Part 2 of the current online catalogue supersedes the preliminary list that appeared in the printed volume of Part 1. We have included on the site a memorandum by Mary Bilder in 2014 that offers advice to students and enthusiasts about how to undertake further research using the catalogue.³⁷

1. List of Appeals (Including “Not True Appeals”)

a. What is an Appeal?

The list includes controversies indexed as appeals from the 13 continental colonies that ultimately became the United States, the Caribbean, and Canada, or that identify themselves as appeals in their descriptions in the APC, beginning with the establishment in 1696 of the Lords Commissioners of Trade and Plantations and continuing until the Revolutionary War. The list also includes a limited number of earlier cases from colonies noted by Joseph Smith as sending appeals.³⁸

The 776 reports of appeals listed in Part 1 and Part 2 differ somewhat from the count in Smith’s Appeals to the Privy Council. We do not know how Smith categorized appeals to reach the statistics he provided in his Appendix A, Appellate Jurisdiction of the Privy Council, 1696–1783 (p. 667–671). The underlying data may lie

³⁸ Smith, p.73, states that in addition to the 14 appeals of Edmund Randolph, there are 16 appeals before 1696 from the colonies in Part 1, but he does not name them. It would seem that they are the following: Massachusetts: Thayre v Savage and three appeals of Jahleel Brenton; New Hampshire: Walton v Walford, Barefoot v Wadleigh, and four appeals by William Vaughan; New York: Ward v Palmer, Darvall v Hall, Wright v Cornwall, and Billop v West; and Virginia: Bland v Codd and Ludwell v Toton. Identifying the cases in Part 2 is more difficult. Smith (ibid.) states that there were 16 pre-1696 appeals from Barbados, five from Jamaica, three from Bermuda, two from the Leeward Islands. These almost certainly include from Barbados in Part 2: Appeal of Hanson, Appeal of Young and Hanson, Appeal of Wytham, Appeal of Goldingham, Raynsford v Gorges, Appeal of Scott, Appeal of Thornhill, Knights v Hallett, Witham v Gray, Appeal of Lane, Appeal of Hallett, Holder v Coates, Appeal of Sharpe, and Appeal of Bate, for a total of fourteen. The remaining two are probably among the four pre-1696 Barbados cases listed among the “not true appeals” in notes 41 and 44: APC nos. 115, 145, 172, and 206. Part 2 has eight pre-1696 cases from Jamaica: Mingham v Martin (1), Mingham v Martin (2), In re The Swallow, Appeal of Sadler, Appeal of Towers, Appeal of Ivy, Appeal of Elletson, and Appeal of White; four from Bermuda: Hubbard v Smailes, Richier v Trott, Richier v Goddard, and Appeal of Hubbard; and three from the Leeward Islands: St. Lowe v Kirwan (Antigua), Rodney v Cole (Nevis), and Appeal of Cooke (Nevis). We leave it to the reader to get to Smith’s numbers by judiciously combining related cases and/or eliminating those that do not fit some possible definition of an “appeal.”

somewhere in the unprocessed boxes of his papers at Columbia University. Moreover, we are less confident about the ease of categorizing appeals into Smith's three categories of affirmed, reversed, and dismissed for non-prosecution. The dispositions given in the APC include, for example, affirmed in part and reversed in part, dismissed, transferred to another decision-making authority, or returned to the colony. We are even less confident about the ease of dividing the appeals into substantive legal categories, common law (civil), common law (criminal), etc., as Smith does in his tables. As a general matter, however, if we exclude appeals from what Smith calls "non-American jurisdictions," e.g., India, Jersey, Guernsey, his overall total (795) is quite close to the total number of our reports (776).

The Privy Council also heard a small number of appeals from royal commissions on boundary disputes and on the long-running controversy between the Mohegans and the colony of Connecticut. That category of complaints is not included in this list of appeals. Researchers interested in these matters are advised to consult the significant number of secondary sources on these topics.

What counts as an "appeal" is an issue of some complexity. The vast majority of the cases listed here resemble modern notions of appeals by private parties from lower court determinations, but the Privy Council heard matters in this process that blur these boundaries. Some matters were in fact petitions for assistance of other sorts; some were appeals meant for other bodies; some lack a clear lower court judgment. Prize and admiralty matters generate more than their share of confusion. Some inclusions appear to be the result of indexing choices made by APC editors. Joseph Smith, in his most scrupulous manner, sometimes notes that matters he treats extensively are not in a technical sense "appeals." For example, in the case of Bayard v Rex (New York, 08_1702_02), Smith notes that the case really reflects the pardoning power of the Council. Without further investigation into each case, it would have been a challenge to limit the list to those that fit the technical category of "true" appeal.

These "not true appeals" represent the most significant substantive difference between Parts 1 and 2. In Part 1, we erred on the side of inclusion of such actions. In Part 2, we excluded the "not true appeals" category from the case reports in the catalogue. They are categorized and listed in the footnotes that follow here. The vast majority of these instances appear in volume 2 of the APC, which covers 1680–1720.³⁹ Our impression is that they were the result of uncertain boundaries with respect to the appeals process, and that as the procedures were clarified, these instances disappeared. The substantive areas in which the uncertain jurisdiction is most evident are the admiralty and prize cases. The CSP, both the Domestic Series and the Colonial Series, the America and West Indies volumes, and other administrative records of the British Government, contain entries related to many of these matters, and they are all conveniently searchable through the website British History Online.⁴⁰

The “not true appeals” emphasize the gradual imposition of categories and rules on the system of appealing from the British colonies to the Privy Council. Researchers should be cautious about comparisons made in the number and types of appeals between this early period and the later periods, when the institutional structure had become clarified.

In general, these “not true appeals” fall into one of the following categories. First, some items represent orders referring petitions that relate to legal matters (e.g., the restoration of an estate), but in which the petitioner had not proceeded through the colonial courts.⁴¹ Some of these items arose in the late seventeenth century, when the petitions of Robert Cunyngham concerning his lands in St. Christopher claimed by John Spooner and an order referring same to committee with the petition of John Spooner (5 papers) dated March 1725 are held at The National Archives in Conservation (PC 1/58/2A). These papers have not been viewed by the compilers. It is possible that there is some relation to the appeal of Lambert v Spooner (https://amesfoundation.law.harvard.edu/ColonialAppeals/CaribAppeals/report_carib_mysqli.php?report_no=STC_1721_00), but that has not been verified.

appeals procedure and institutions were still in development. For example, Benjamin Middleton petitioned in February 1681/82 over the alleged application to his deceased father's plantation of an Antigua act requiring resettlement and tax payments to reclaim land lost in the French invasion of 1667.⁴² These types of petitions continued, however, throughout the period. Lastly, several relate to the appeals process itself. In 1702, Barbados merchants brought a petition to the Committee for hearing appeals complaining about the “Clause inserted in the Governors Instructions for allowing Appeals” from judgments on Barbados. The complaint appeared to be that appeals were only permitted on cases over 500 pounds. The merchants were apparently heard at two meetings in July. The Committee referred the matter to the Board of Trade to “consider not only this clause but also for what lesser sum appeals may fittingly be admitted,” as well as a method to admit appeals from the Inferior courts of Barbados to the Governor and Council.⁵² In 1711, London and Bristol merchants petitioned for the confirmation of all Jamaican judgments “grounded on the laws and statutes of England and the known customs of that island.”⁵³ In 1714, Samuel Bernard and Kingston freeholders and inhabitants petitioned in favor of the possible confirmation of a Jamaican act pulling down buildings without apparent indemnification (in the aftermath of the 1712 hurricane). The Committee advised against confirming the act unless indemnification was provided for and, in the alternative, suggested a different approach more likely to be confirmed.⁵⁴

In Part 1, these matters are included in the catalogue, if indexed or described as an appeal, leaving to the researcher further classification. Twenty-six reports most clearly falling short of the definition of an appeal in various ways are marked “not a true appeal” and can be searched separately by using the “true” appeals search form, which can accessed from Specific Search Options or from Useful Lists.⁵⁵ Comments in the Notes sections allude to the actions most obviously not formal appeals. Presumably the twenty-six “not true appeals” in Part I fall into the general categories discussed above. The 231 reports in Part I plus the 26 “not true appeals” account for the 257 reports.

The Privy Council’s registers were not online when Part 1 was compiled. Their availability now, along with a growing number of related sources, will be a help in developing a more definitive list.

- full and short name of the appeal as compiled from the APC entry, though in Part 2 the short-form name of the case is the same as that used in the header of the report and so is not listed separately;
- references to all of the entries in the APC with links to those entries;
- references to entries in the Privy Council's registers with the TNA request number (PC 2) for the registers and with links to the register entries on the Anglo-American Legal Tradition (AALT) website;⁵⁶
- references to entries in the Calendar of State Papers, Colonial: America and the West Indies, 1680–1700 (CSP), if, and only if, that information was supplied by the editors of the APC;
- the names and dates of lower court actions as given in the APC;
- the names of participants;
- vessel names, if any;⁵⁷
- the subject matter and disposition of the case, if given.

In Part 1, the header and the short form of the appeal name may differ. In Part 2, the short form of the name is the same as the header.

In Part 1, where a full case name could not be derived from the APC or Smith's Appeals to the Privy Council, the case was called "X, appeal of." In Part 2, it is called "Appeal of X."

In Parts 1 and 2, we have used the term "revived" to describe situations in which one appellant substitutes for another. Some of these are genuine revivals, where the Privy Council allows someone to pursue an appeal that had effectively been abandoned by the first appellant. Some of these are substitutions, where, for example, an heir or executor substitutes for his or her ancestor or testator. There is a large variety of situations encompassed in our term "revived."

c. Relationship of Catalogue Descriptions to Acts of the Privy Council, Colonial Series

The APC, the foundation of the catalogue's list, was compiled from the Privy Council's registers. Without reliance on the APC, this catalogue would have been too difficult to compile from scratch, given our resources. Nonetheless, the APC was published in 1908–1912, with the underlying work carried out by W. L. Grant and James Munro under the supervision of Sir Almeric W. Fitzroy, clerk of the Privy

⁵⁶ <http://aalt.law.uh.edu>.

⁵⁷ Owen and Tolley, in Courts of Admiralty in Colonial America, p.237, note that "terms for vessels were used loosely by the colonists. For example, a 'ship' is technically a three-masted square-rigged vessel but in all likelihood the term was most often used as synonymous with the generic 'vessel.'" Vessels here are described using whatever term is applied in the APC.

Council. The APC abstracts, which appear as the basis for this catalogue, are obviously dated in choice of language and historical sensibility. Researchers are advised to keep this aspect of the catalogue in mind. For example, in the APC female executors are sometimes called “executor” and sometimes “executrix”; we have carried these designations over into the catalogue. This means that if one is searching for female executors, one has to use both terms.

We noted and corrected some obvious errors in the APC, but further study of the appeals will undoubtedly uncover errors, confusions, and omissions that are reproduced here. Use of the APC and the registers means, of course, that appeals granted in the colonies but not pursued to the next level are not noted.

The cases grouped together in the APC are grouped together here as a single report.

Dates used in the APC are accepted.

Spelling in the APC is retained. When more than one spelling of a name is used, it is indicated in the case description for that appeal only, even if the same person appears in a different case.

Each participant’s status, occupation, and place of residence or origin is given, if provided. Descriptors for that information use the terminology employed in the APC. The relationships of the participants are explained as best they can be determined from the APC entry. Parties are described as deceased if the APC so states or if the APC indicates the presence of an heir; in cases of uncertainty the descriptor “presumed deceased” is used.

Similarly, if the APC referred to a person with the description, slave or Negro, those descriptions have been retained in the catalogue. For further information, see the Useful List, References to Enslaved Persons in Parts 1 and 2.⁵⁸

In cases involving vessels, the name of the case used by the APC or by Joseph Smith is used. If neither applies a name to the case, the parties are named if the parties are certain. Otherwise, the case is called “X, appeal of” or “Appeal of X” when there is an element of doubt as to the opposing party.

The nature of the case is likewise taken from the wording of the APC. Note, however, that the sketchy nature of the material in the APC often obscures the real issue in an appeal. What appears to be an action to recover a debt becomes really an issue of currency valuation; what looks to be just another family dispute in fact questions the validity of a statute regarding inheritance.

In compiling the APC, its original editors took little interest in the specifics of appeals from the colonies and, unfortunately, chose not to document them in detail. To quote from the preface to volume 3, p.xii, of the APC, “Considerations of space have led in this volume to the compression into very narrow limits of the numerous colonial appeals. Most of these are of no biographical or legal interest and to have given in full the complicated details of the family broils and commercial vicissitudes of the forgotten, or the record of the orders for hearing, postponements, partial hearings and further postponements, would have been neither advantageous nor possible. But in no case has a name or the number of any page referring to the case been omitted, and any matters of biographical or legal importance have been given at length.” Researchers seeking more detail are encouraged to consult the registers and the CSP, the contents of which have not been searched beyond the citations given in the APC.

In Part 1, the use of square brackets in the reports was confined, for the most part, to information that was in Smith’s Appeals to the Privy Council but not in the APC. In Part 2, the use of square brackets has been expanded. The most common use of square brackets in Part 2 is in Participants’ Lists, where it either indicates something that must be so to make sense of the case, such as that someone is dead, even though the APC doesn’t say so, or comes from information about the person from other sources.

Any other commentary not directly from the APC is referenced to its source. Only material in the Notes section of the description is provided by the compilers. Because of the particular interest in slavery in scholarly research, the compiler has included in the Notes references by the APC to instances in which enslaved persons figure in an appeal. However, a reading of the printed cases will undoubtedly reveal more cases concerning enslaved persons.

In Part 1, references outside of the APC are sometimes included in an entry in the report called “Additional Sources.” That entry is not used in Part 2, and such references are divided between the Notes and Other Documents.

A major difference between Part 1 and Part 2 is that Part 2 has an Index of Persons and Places, which is provided with its own search engines. The process of creating this index allowed us to identify many persons who appear in more than one report, but also to note where persons who have the same name do not appear to be the same person. It also allowed us to identify a number of alternative spellings of names, to confirm the death of persons who in Part 1 were described as “presumed deceased” (although a number of such persons remain), and to specify relationships among the parties that were missing in Part 1. The Participants’ List that accompanies every report is constructed from the Index and is linked to it. Similarly, the Index is linked to the reports in which the person appears.

The Index of Persons contains information that is not necessarily derived from the APC. In some cases, this information was derived from documents that underlay the APC, e.g. the Privy Council’s registers or the printed cases; in some cases it was derived from secondary sources. Wherever the Participants’ List contains information that is not in the APC, that fact is noted in the Notes section of the report. By and large, however, we have, as in Part 1, retained the terminology used to describe the person in the APC (status, occupation, place of residence or origin, etc.) in the Participants' List; in the Index of Persons, we have normalized this terminology.

While the catalogue itself is complete within the limits described above, much more clearly could and should be done. One of the advantages of web publication is that the contents of the website can be expanded as new research is done. We have included in two reports in Part 1 (Oulton v Savage [Massachusetts, 05_1717_00]⁵⁹ and Apthorpe v Pateshall [Massachusetts, 05_1768_00]⁶⁰) samples of such additional research, matter that was discovered in a quick trip to the Massachusetts State Archives. A more ambitious example of additional research is a memorandum⁶¹ that Charles Donahue prepared about the 47 cases that originated in actions of ejectment or like ejectment in the 13 colonies. The Notes in the reports reference this memorandum where it is relevant. In Part 2, there are similar examples of additional research in connection with Mingham v Martin (JAM_1680_00),⁶² Lyons v Lyons (ANT_1726_03),⁶³ Mansfield v Concanen (JAM_1742_06),⁶⁴ Olyphant v Manning (JAM_1751_04),⁶⁵ and Millward v Lindsay (JAM_1768_02).⁶⁶

2. Printed Cases

A number of the appeals in the catalogue are accompanied by links to digital images of a "printed case." Americans might use the term "brief." These printed cases, central to the appeals, contain a summary of the facts and the legal arguments.

Fifty-four of the reports in Part 1 contain printed cases, the earliest dating from 1727/8.⁶⁷ The corresponding number for Part 2 is 107, the earliest dating from 1680.

⁶⁷ In attempting to locate printed cases, the compilers followed up on the leads of Joseph Smith and consulted various printed guides, such as Charles Andrews and Frances Davenport's Guide to the Manuscript Materials for the History of the United States to 1783; Grace Griffin's Guide to Manuscripts Relating to American History in British Depositories; the Library of Congress, Handbook of Manuscripts; and John Raimo's Guide to Manuscripts Relating to America in Great Britain and Ireland, plus the online catalogues of historical societies and major research libraries and the online ESTC. Tips from librarians sometimes led to other findings when material had not yet been catalogued. All of the

In many reports, the cases for both the appellant and respondent have been located (Part 1: 42; Part 2: 73). In others, the cases of only one party have been found (Part 1: 7, appellant only; 5, respondent only. Part 2: 24, appellant only; 10, respondent only). Seven of the reports in Part 2 have two printed cases for one or the other or both parties, and one has three printed cases for different appellants. A grand total of 284 printed cases, some with multiple copies, are found in the two Parts. Many include handwritten notations and underlinings, some attributable and others a mystery. All have a similar look and feel, mirroring not only each other but also appeals presented in this era to the Lords Commissioners for Hearing Prize Appeals and to the House of Lords.

The major collections of printed cases are found in the Hardwicke Papers in the British Library, many with notes of Charles Yorke; in the papers of Sir George Lee in the Law Library of Congress; and in the collection of William Samuel Johnson in the Law Library at Columbia University. A smattering of cases has been located in other repositories. As mentioned before, we hope that additional printed cases will be found; we did not visit the Caribbean.

For each appeal for which a printed case has been located and viewed, information as to the holding library or libraries is provided with a link to its images if (1) the copy contains manuscript notes, (2) it is the only copy of the case located, or (3) it is one of several copies located, none with manuscript notes. Where a number of copies meets this last criterion, preference is given to the one at the British Library. Call numbers at holding libraries are based on those in use when material was viewed from 2006–2019.

In Part 1, we gave the English Short Title Catalogue (ESTC) number for those printed cases that we found in it. We have not included references to the ESTC in Part 2. The proportion of such cases currently is small and will be augmented by this work.

3. Privy Council Documents

For some appeals, related documents filed with the Privy Council remain extant. Privy Council documents within the PC 1 classification at The National Archives at Kew are included with their PC 1 reference number and are linked to their images.

printed cases were seen either by the compiler or by a librarian at the holding institution who verified ownership and whether there were manuscript notes.

It was not possible to consult the papers of Privy Council members attending hearings of appeals or all papers of counsel on the appeals. Efforts were made to check archive entries for counsel in the Oxford Dictionary of National Biography if they covered the years in question and if the description of the holdings held out some hope of finding a printed case within them. The librarian at Lincoln's Inn reports that though it holds some papers of counsel, no printed cases are within their collection. Charles Yorke's copies of his cases are in the Hardwicke collection. Sadly, the papers of Alexander Forrester, who is second in number only to Yorke as counsel on the signed cases located so far, do not seem to have survived.

The majority are linked to the Anglo-American Legal Tradition (AALT) website.⁶⁸

Documents are entered as ordered and described in volume 6 of the APC or the online catalogue of TNA. Other classifications at TNA were not searched for relevant material, and only a few selected documents from other classifications are noted here.

4. Privy Council's Registers

References to the Privy Council's registers (classified as PC 2 at TNA) are linked to the AALT website.⁶⁹ PC 2 page numbers are expanded beyond those listed in the APC if contiguous to the APC listing.

5. Additional Resources Available in the Catalogue

As an aid to researchers, the following separate lists have been prepared, all of which can be accessed from the "Useful Lists" index page:⁷⁰

- appeals arranged by colony and date using the long form of the case name;
- appeals arranged alphabetically by the short form of the case name;
- all vessels named in actions, arranged alphabetically;
- a bibliography of all published works cited in the catalogue;
- all the reports that contain printed cases by colony, report number, and case name;
- all the printed cases, with the report number and the surname of the party for whom they were produced;
- all the printed cases that have been assigned numbers in the English Short Title Catalogue (Part 1 only);
- a search engine that allows one to list both those reports that are believed to be "true" appeals and those that are not (Part 1 only);
- legal counsel who signed the printed cases, arranged alphabetically by their surnames, accompanied by a list of the appeals each signed, as compiled from the printed cases located to date;
- names, addresses, and phone numbers of repositories identified as holding a printed case;
- a conversion chart noting the differences in TNA and APC forms of citation and dating of volumes of the Privy Council's registers;
- all the references to enslaved persons that have so far been discovered;
- references to plantations or land in the APC (Part 2 only).

Advice on Using the Catalogue

There are a number of ways to navigate through the catalogue. On the home page,⁷¹ there are links to the “Useful Lists” index page and to three successively more detailed chronological lists with (1) colony and report number only; (2) colony, report number, and case name; and (3) year, report number, case name, and colony.

1. Markers in the Reports

a. Report Number

The report number is broken into three parts separated by underscores, for example, 08_1802_02 or ANT_1687_00.⁷² The first part designates the name of the colony. The 13 continental colonies are designated as follows: 01 = Connecticut, 02 = Delaware, 03 = Georgia, 04 = Maryland, 05 = Massachusetts, 06 = New Hampshire, 07 = New Jersey, 08 = New York, 09 = North Carolina, 10 = Pennsylvania, 11 = Rhode Island, 12 = South Carolina, 13 = Virginia, For the Caribbean and Canada, ANT = Antigua, BAH = Bahamas, BAR = Barbados, BER = Bermuda, DOM = Dominica, EAS = East Florida, GRE = Grenada, GUI = Guiana, JAM = Jamaica, MON = Montserrat, NEV = Nevis, NEW = Newfoundland, NOV = Nova Scotia, QUE = Quebec, STC = St. Christopher (St. Kitts), STV = St. Vincent, TOB = Tobago, TOR = Tortola, WES = West Florida. These names do not always reflect how these colonies were called in the Privy Council records, but it seemed best to standardize on what the names became. The second part of the report number designates the year (New Style or Gregorian calendar⁷³) of the first entry in the Privy Council records. The third part is a reference number that we assigned to each appeal from that colony in that year. “00” indicates that it was the only appeal in that year from that colony.

b. Report Name

The APC frequently consolidates appeals from more than one case in the colonies when the cases dealt with the same or similar issues or have overlapping parties. In most cases what the APC does is reflected in the Privy Council records themselves. Later in the history of the appeal, different cases may be treated differently, for example, by having a different committee report for each case. The catalogue’s reports consolidate appeals when the APC does, but normally list at the head of the report the short names of all the cases involved in the appeal. All the case names are also found in the full contents lists referred to in the first paragraph of this section. Other references to reports, however, for example, those that appear in the returns from searches, list only one name for each report.

⁷¹ <https://amesfoundation.law.harvard.edu/ColonialAppeals/index.php>.

⁷² https://amesfoundation.law.harvard.edu/ColonialAppeals/CaribAppeals/report_carib_mysqli.php?report_no=ANT_1687_00.

⁷³ Until 1753, the APC gives the day of the month in Old Style. That means that although the year begins on 1 January and not 25 March, an appeal filed before 1753 in the first few days of January will be designated by the preceding year in the Gregorian calendar.

2. Report Navigation

There is a blue navigation bar at the top of each report. In addition to providing links to the home page, a list of Abbreviations used, the Bibliography, and the search engines, it allows one to navigate to the first, previous, next, and last report in chronological order for the entire database of that Part, or in alphabetical order by colony and then by date within each colony (i.e., in report number order).

3. Bibliography and Abbreviations

Citations in the reports are normally given in short form. The Bibliography,⁷⁴ which is available on the navigation bar of the reports, gives the full references. With the exception of references that appear in a large number or all reports, the Bibliography gives the report number in which the item is cited, with a link to the report itself. The Bibliography begins with a list of Abbreviations⁷⁵ that are used throughout the catalogue. This list can also be reached from the navigation bar.

4. Searching by Search Engine

There are separate search engines for each Part, necessitated by the fact that the databases for the two Parts are separate. Both sets of search engines have a basic search engine and two specific search engines that operate in the same way. For reasons described below, Part 1 has one specific search engine that is not found in Part 2, and Part 2 has a number of specific search engines that are not found in Part 1.

a. Basic Search

The basic search engine⁷⁶ searches most of the fields and most of the tables in the database. The most important fields that are not included are those that contain references to the APC, to the original Privy Council registers, and to the documents that we found at The National Archives. There are specific searches⁷⁷ for these fields. The basic search engine searches for any string of alphanumeric characters that the user enters. Strings may be truncated by entering “*”. It is not case sensitive. It does not accommodate Boolean searching.⁷⁸ The use of quotation marks is not necessary for string searching (because, in effect, that is what it does). The basic search engine

⁷⁴ <https://amesfoundation.law.harvard.edu/ColonialAppeals/Bibliography.php#bibl>.

⁷⁵ <https://amesfoundation.law.harvard.edu/ColonialAppeals/Bibliography.php>.

⁷⁶ <https://amesfoundation.law.harvard.edu/ColonialAppeals/search1.php>.

⁷⁷ <https://amesfoundation.law.harvard.edu/ColonialAppeals/search1.php>.

⁷⁸ Because the search engine searches specific fields in the database rather than the whole report, Boolean searches failed to return many instances where the logic applied at the level of the whole report. Working around that problem resulted in a search engine that was unacceptably slow.

returns a list of reports that contain the searched-for item arranged by the table in which the item is contained. Because the basic search engine searches the database rather than the reports, it will sometimes return words that are in the database but which, for one reason or another, are not included in the reports.

b. Specific Searches

Specific search forms are also provided for the fields that reference the APC and the original registers. Another specific search form is provided for searching the references to the TNA documents in PC 1. These search engines will accommodate Boolean searching and string searches should be enclosed in quotation marks. Part 1 has a specific search engine⁷⁹ that searches for reports marked as “true appeals” or “not true appeals.” “Not true appeals” are not included in the reports for Part 2 but are listed above in Catalogue Contents (1a). A number of specific search engines are provided for the Index of Persons in Part 2 and are described more fully immediately below.

c. Searching the Index of Persons in Part 2

If all you are looking for is the name of a person who appears in one or more of the Participants’ Lists in the reports in Part 2, it is not necessary to use the search engines for the Index of Persons. Such names will be returned by the basic search engine, and the name in the List is linked to the Index and the name in the Index is linked back to the Report. The search engines for the Index itself are designed to allow research into the characteristics of all the persons who appear in Part 2. It allows you, for example, to search for all the persons who are described as coming from a particular place, e.g. Kingston in Jamaica, or who have a specific role or function in a case, e.g., attorney. A detailed description of how these engines work is found on the page that lists them and gives a form for their use.⁸⁰

5. Navigating by Useful Lists

Another way of navigating through this material is by making use of the page called “Useful Lists.”⁸¹ The contents of these lists are described above in Additional Resources Available in the Catalogue.

6. Viewing Images

a. View Link

If the database contains an image of the item being referred to, there will be a link marked “view” in the right-hand margin of the line.

⁷⁹ <https://amesfoundation.law.harvard.edu/ColonialAppeals/search1.php>.

⁸⁰ https://amesfoundation.law.harvard.edu/ColonialAppeals/CaribAppeals/search_index_mysql.php.

⁸¹ https://amesfoundation.law.harvard.edu/ColonialAppeals/useful_lists.php.

b. APC and CSP View Images

Images are provided in PDF for the pages of the APC that describe the case or cases that are the subject of the report, and the same holds true for the descriptions of the case in the CSP that are referenced in the APC. The view links on the lines noting the entry in the original registers of the Privy Council (PC 2) take you ultimately to the relevant image on the AALT website⁸² at the University of Houston, after stopping off at a page that lists all of the PC 2 entries relevant to the report. (The view links open on a new page or tab, so that you will not lose your place in the report.)

c. Viewing Printed Cases and Other Documents

The view links that are marked on the printed cases, on the handwritten documents in The National Archives, and on the relatively small number of “Other Documents” for which we have provided images, take you to an intermediate image list. These are arranged by library or archive and list each of the images that concern the report that are in that library or archive, normally by linked page numbers. (The page numbers are our creation, and do not necessarily correspond to the page or folio numbers on the original; these latter are given in the references on the image list.) Clicking on the page link will bring you to the image in question; it is embedded in an HTML frame, which provides the means to navigate through the document. The previous and following images (where they exist) are listed in the upper left-hand corner of the frame, and large navigation arrows at the top and bottom of the image allow one to flip back and forth. A few of the image holders have a link in the upper right-hand corner to images of higher resolution than those that are displayed. These images are sent directly to your browser (which may object to receiving them because of the size). From there they can be downloaded and manipulated if you want, say, to study watermarks or a particularly puzzling piece of handwriting.

7. Persons and Places Index (PPI)

As previously mentioned, the PPI is new in Part 2. It is a comprehensive index of all the persons mentioned in the reports. It includes places to the extent that they identify persons. The main entries are mostly by surname. To search for places, use the index search engine⁸³ or the search feature on your browser.

The index is created dynamically from the contents of the database. It lists all of the names found in the Participants’ Lists in the reports (4,011 as of this writing, including cross-references). Since it indexes everything in the Participants’ Lists, it includes a few names that are not strictly speaking either persons or places, e.g., the African Company in JAM_1708_01.⁸⁴ Notes are highly selective. We have attempted full identification only of the most prominent people, those who are likely to appear in the ODNB. This has meant that in a few cases, e.g., Attorney General of Jamaica, whom we have identified only tentatively in the notes, the listing will be found under the place (Jamaica in this case) where the person held his office, with cross-references under the name(s) of the possible holder(s).

⁸² <http://aalt.law.uh.edu/>.

⁸⁴ https://amesfoundation.law.harvard.edu/ColonialAppeals/CaribAppeals/report_carib_mysqli.php.

The index is sorted by the main element of the surname (“de” and similar elements in surnames are inverted) and the given name, followed by the report number. This means that where there is more than one row of people with the same surname and given name, those rows are not necessarily in alphabetical order. We have not combined persons with the same surname and given name who appear in different cases, even where we are confident that they are the same person. Rather, the second of two persons with the same surname and given name is marked as “same” in parentheses. Where we are less confident, the “same” is preceded by a question mark. Similarly, “another” and “?another” reflect different degrees of confidence that we are dealing with two different people. In all cases, the reference is to the immediately preceding entry. Hence “another” followed by “same” indicates that this “same” is the one who was marked “another.”

We have been sparing with cross-references, using them only where the main entry for a person is not under the surname derived from the Participants’ Lists or, in a very few cases, where we thought, but were not sure, that someone was the same as someone else with a different spelling. Alternative spellings of surnames are combined without cross-references. Use the index search engine⁸⁵ to search for alternative or more usual spellings.

8. Browsers

We have tested the pages in up-to-date (as of January 2020) versions of Firefox, Microsoft Edge, and Google Chrome. They do not look quite the same in those browsers (the vertical spacing on some pages is somewhat different), but they work in all three. One peculiarity of Firefox and Microsoft Edge is that in references to the PPI, particularly later in the alphabet, these browsers take you a bit beyond where you want to go. You have to scroll up to get the entry you are looking for. Of course, you would have to scroll up anyway to make sure that the surname, which is on a separate row preceding everyone who has that surname, is the one that you are looking for.

We would appreciate hearing of any difficulties that users encounter with other browsers via email.⁸⁶

Additional Resources Available Elsewhere

Related materials can be found in manuscript, print collections, and online. These documents include petitions, committee reports, opinions of law officers, orders of reference, and filings found in local colonial court records. For example, the Journals of the Board of Trade and Plantations, 1704–1782 and the Calendar of State Papers, Colonial are available at British History Online⁸⁷ with some links to images of the documents in the case of the CSP. The CSP is also available with The National Archives collection CO1 (Privy Council and related bodies: America and West Indies, Colonial Papers) in digital form in ProQuest’s Colonial State Papers, for those with access to a subscription. Citations to related documents in those series are not generally noted here unless referenced in the APC. Grace Griffin’s Guide to Manuscripts enumerates many printed cases and related materials available at the Library of Congress in transcription.

In their works, Joseph Smith and Mary Bilder provide many additional citations to related primary and secondary materials. The bibliography of manuscript sources in Bilder’s dissertation, Salamanders and Sons of God, is an especially rich resource. Only a limited number of additional resources are noted on this website. These include: (1) reference to manuscript drafts of printed cases, (2) the reporting of the colonial case by an early American reporter, and (3) library holdings of extremely relevant manuscript collections. No attempt has been made to bring the bibliographies of Smith and Bilder up to date with later secondary resources. Only when necessary to make sense of an APC entry were additional secondary sources consulted and noted in the database. Researchers are encouraged to check for new resources as more and more materials, including colonial court records, become available online every day.

Updating

Researchers are encouraged to email the Ames Foundation⁸⁸ upon the discovery of additional printed cases along with verifying documentation. Please include “Colonial Appeals” in the subject line of the email. The Bibliography is updatable and we would encourage people to send us related citations.

Acknowledgements

We have worked on Appeals to the Privy Council from the American Colonies for nearly 15 years – a long stretch. In that time, many people have provided advice and support without whom we would certainly not have completed the project. Many of those who helped us in Part I have moved on to other positions in their careers; several remain with us to this day. We wish to thank each and every one and so reprint here our acknowledgments from Part I and add those colleagues with new or expanded roles in Part 2.

Acknowledgments for Part 1 (1 March 2014): Compilation of the list of appeals and related data from the Acts of the Privy Council, Colonial Series and location of extant printed cases and documents were carried out by Sharon Hamby O'Connor, Associate Professor Emerita at Boston College Law School, bolstered, supported, and assisted throughout by her husband and photographer, Ron O'Connor. The project was the inspiration of Mary Sarah Bilder, Professor of Law at Boston College Law School, who provided invaluable scholarly advice and counsel throughout the process and who has worked assiduously to insure the catalogue's long-term accessibility on the web. It was nurtured into existence by the wise guidance and continual assistance of the late Morris L. Cohen, Professor Emeritus at Yale Law School. Its presentation on this website was made possible through the generous support of the Ames Foundation and the extraordinary commitment and dedication to the enterprise of its Literary Director, Professor Charles Donahue, Jr., Paul A. Freund Professor of Law at Harvard Law School. Its design and functionality are all due to the combination of his technical sophistication and his willingness to deal in depth with an historical period far removed from the medieval era of which he is master. Temple Goodhue, the proofreader for the project, added a degree of precision to this presentation that could never have been achieved without her. The technical support team at the Harvard Law School Library, especially Annie Cain, who manages the Ames server, and Stephen Chapman, Manager, Digital Strategy for Collections, provided excellent assistance throughout the process. Filippa Anzalone, Associate Dean for Library and Technology Services and Professor of Law, and Nick Szydowski, Digital Services and Institutional Repository Librarian at Boston College Law School, thoughtfully enabled the presence and preservation of the project through the website Digital Commons @ Boston College Law School. Jason Liu, Law School Technology Consultant, also at the Boston College Law School, graciously prepared black and white images for the many documents from The National Archives. Devon Coleman and Michael Rios assisted with the linking to images of original documents. The librarians at the various repositories holding printed cases and Privy Council documents were unfailingly helpful. Special thanks are due to Paul Johnson at The National Archives at Kew. At the British Library, our special thanks go to Frances Harris, Richard Davies, Jonathan Sims, the staff of Imaging Services, and especially to Arnold Hunt, Curator of Modern Historical Manuscripts, for his steadfast perseverance and patience. Much appreciation is extended to Robert C. Palmer, Cullen Professor of Law and History at the University of Houston, for his enhancement of the online availability of Privy Council resources. The efforts of A. Mitchell Fraas, Schoenberg Scholar-in-Residence at the University of Pennsylvania Libraries, the cooperation of the officers of the American Society for Legal History, and the generosity of Linda Price, daughter of the late Joseph Smith, enabled the inclusion of a scanned copy of Smith's monumental work, Appeals to the Privy Council from the American Plantations, on this site.

Acknowledgments for Part 2 (June 2020): In addition to the many people thanked in Part 1, there are also many to thank for their help with this latest project.

Several people played new or expanded roles in the preparation of Part 2.

In particular, the three of us thank especially Devon Coleman, whose contributions to both form and substance in Parts 1 and 2 cannot be overstated. We admire her command of the appeals process, her technical skills, and her painstaking care with detail. Her research into the lives of the litigants and her preparation of an Index for Part 2 added a valuable research component to the appeals from the Caribbean and Canada. It is truly no stretch to say that without her there would be no Part 2.

Patricia Crotty did a masterful job as copy editor/proofreader for a project that could at times be interesting and at others very tedious. We appreciate her patience, perseverance, and care.

We also want to acknowledge again those who have continued their support.

Robert Palmer, Cullen Professor of Law and History at the University of Houston, for his continued expansion of access to Privy Council documents, especially the Privy Council's registers and the fragile PC 1 documents, through the Anglo-American Legal Tradition website (AALT).⁸⁹

Imaging services departments in the various repositories, especially the British Library, and Ron O'Connor for photographing images not available from those sources.

Nick Szydowski, now Digital Initiatives and Scholarly Communication Librarian at Boston College Law Library, for advice in the ever-changing world of digital scholarship and access.

The IT Department of the Harvard Law School, which maintains the "back-end" of the Ames Foundation's server. In particular, Branden Loizides recently saw to it that the server got moved to a much more secure location in the "cloud" and also kept us in the loop while the process was going on so that there was a minimum of downtime at our end and a maximum of understanding of what was going on.

Librarians at holding repositories, especially Jonathan Sims, Content Strategy Librarian, British Library, for his support and encouragement and his continuing efforts in making the British Library's collection of Privy Council appeals available online.

William S. Hein and Company for its willingness to produce a print edition of Part 2 that expands the reach of the appeals research to a broader community.

The dean of Harvard Law School (both former dean, Martha Minow, and current dean, John Manning) and the dean of Boston College Law School, Vincent Rougeau, for support for the project which showed itself in so many ways.

One of us (Mary Sarah Bilder) has served as the Literary Director of the Ames Foundation during the preparation of Part 2. We all are grateful to the Foundation's President, Annette Gordon-Reed, and to the Board for their encouragement of our expansion into the Caribbean and Canada. The financial support of the Foundation has been invaluable throughout the life of the project.

It has been a pleasure working with all the people noted above and with each other. We will miss having appeals to the Privy Council on our to-do list.

Contents by First Year in Privy Council, Report Number, and Case Name

Like Contents by Colony, this table lists only one short-form case name for each report. Where there are multiple reports for the same year, the order is by report number and, hence, by colony. The items are numbered in order to get some sense of chronological proportions.

ADDITIONAL RESEARCH

The relationship between Jeffrey Lyons and the two Henry Lyonses is never quite stated, but the committee report, as summarized in the PC register, suggests that he was the son of Henry (1) and the brother and heir of Henry (2). How Elizabeth's dower ended up in the estate of Henry (1) is not explained. If we remember the common-law rule that the widow is not entitled to possession of her dower until it was assigned to her by her husband's heir, then we would expect that Elizabeth's dower would be in the estate of Henry (2) not of Henry (1). Considering how rare common-law dower was in this period, however, perhaps we should imagine that Elizabeth's dower was not common-law dower, but a jointure, which the elder Henry had promised to pay and which remained a debt of his estate. The Privy Council's decree affirms the Chancery court's order that Elizabeth is entitled to 'dower' out of Henry (1)'s estate, but subjects it to a proportional reduction by the debts of the estate and the legacies made in the will. Compare JAM_1768_02, where the committee report says that the widow's annuity in lieu of dower should come out of the estate of her late husband, but the APC mistakenly says that it should come out of that of another man. See Additional Research on JAM_1768_02.

Smith v Buckley – Report No. STC_1753_02 (APC, v.4 [204] p.198–199).

The Court of Errors in Antigua had refused to hear Smith’s appeal of the judgment of the Court of King’s Bench and Common Pleas because the amount in question was too low. Thus Smith petitioned the Committee for the right to bring a writ of error, then, if necessary, an appeal to the Privy Council. Disposition Judgment of Aug. 1748 reversed; judgment of Sept. 1746 affirmed with costs.

Notes

Eleanor Dunbar, described as an ‘infant’, is also married. Her sisters, Ann and Elizabeth, also infants, are listed as ‘spinsters’. The description of Eleanor, coupled with the fact that Mary is described in the printed case (p.4) as “Infant, under the Age of 21 Years,” suggests that women were thought of as reaching their majority at 21 without regard to their marital status.

Disposition

Notes

The proceedings in this appeal took place in Carolina as the APC margin note and all Privy Council register entries, except the last, indicate. However, the APC indexes the matter as a Barbadian appeal and the final register entry refers to “a sentence in Barbados.” But for the index and final register entry, this appeal would have been solely attributed to Carolina. In fact, a duplicate report of it is found in Part I under South Carolina (12_1699_00), though South Carolina, North Carolina, and Georgia were not established as separate entities at this date.

Notes

Smith (p.378) notes this case as an example where chancery procedure was extended to interstitial common law practice: evidence from the lower case was annexed to the verdict so that the Committee could judge it as a whole.

A case entitled Anonymous, 2 P. Wms. 75, 24 Eng. Rep. 646 (P.C. 1722) (memorandum dated 9 August 1722) (view) is said to be Mendez v Battyn by Barry Cahill in “How Far English Laws are in Force Here: Nova Scotia’s First Century of Reception Law Jurisprudence,” University of New Brunswick Law Journal, 42 (1993) 133–153. The date of Mendez makes the attribution plausible but we have not found corroborating evidence.

The appellants’ printed case is summarized, with an additional note about the respondent, in Caribbeana: miscellaneous papers relating to the history, genealogy, topography, and antiquities of the British West Indies, ed. Vere Langford Oliver (London: Mitchell, Hughes, and Clarke, 1909–1919), 6:63–64 (view).

Moses Mendez is called Abraham Mendez in his printed case. It is possible that both the APC and the printed case are, in some sense, right and that one name is his given name and the other his patronymic.

Note This manuscript case is undated and was filed with CO 1 documents that date from 1682. It responds to Capt. Mingham's printed case, point by point, and seems to be being referred to, and may have accompanied, Morgan's letter of 12 Nov. 1680 to the Lords of Trade (CSP no. 1585). The document is headed: "The Case of Francis Mingham Master of the Pink Francis of London rightly stated in Answer to his Printed Case which is almost throughout Misrepresented." ADDITIONAL RESEARCH

The APC account of this litigation is quite incomplete. Much more is contained in the CSP, which we have expanded to include the surrounding correspondence, most of which is quite adequately summarized in the CSP. Some of the legal documents, however, are not so summarized. These include Mingham's printed case and Morgan and Martin's response, reproduced above under Printed Cases, and the following

Other Documents: the record, such as it is, of the proceedings in the Grand Court of Jamaica; the petition of Dorothy Mingham to the PC; the depositions of Samuel Harding and Peter Bennett; the answer of Thomas Martin; the deposition of Sir Charles Modyford; and the second petition of Mingham. (Many of the documents in the TNA class CO 1 are bound together in large books, hence the folio numbers.)

Some of the key documents are undated, and some of them refer to documents that may or may not be available at TNA, but if they are, they are not available online. What we have and what is available online in the Calendar of Colonial State Papers (British History Online, publicly available) and the Colonial State Papers collection (Proquest, by subscription) suggests the following outline of the events.

Sometime before 23 Feb. 1680, when Governor Carlisle first mentions it in a letter to the Lords of Trade, Mingham arrived in Port Royal in Jamaica, carrying, among other things, a petition to the PC appealing from the condemnation of his pink Francis of London and an order of the PC dated 10 Oct. 1779 that Morgan and Martin transmit to the PC an account of the proceedings that had led to the condemnation. (See JAM_1679_00.) Morgan and Martin proceeded against Mingham in the Grand Court of Jamaica (with side proceedings in the Chancery Court) for scandal, on the basis of the contents of the petition. These proceedings led to a jury verdict in their favor (£2000 for Morgan and £500 for Martin) and, ultimately, to the imprisonment of Mingham.

As a result of the petition of Mingham's wife Dorothy in the PC in July of 1680, supported by Mingham's printed case, the PC ordered Mingham released, so that he might come to London to pursue his petition. In November, with considerable reluctance, the authorities in Jamaica did so. Morgan's manuscript 'printed case' is probably to be dated with his letter to the Lords of Trade of 12 Nov.

In March of 1681, Mingham petitioned the PC to hear both his appeal with respect to the condemnation and with respect to the proceedings taken against him personally in Jamaica. On 15 April, the Council held that the condemnation was unwarranted and that the £300 for which the ship was sold be restored to Mingham (he had redeemed it for the sale price) but without costs because the seizure "was very Colourable." Turning to the action for scandal, they said: "And as to the Damages recovered against the Petitioner upon the action of Scandall brought against him, we humbly propose that the said Sir Henry Morgan & Thomas Martin do respectively acknowledge Satisfaction upon the said Judgment, to the end that Petitioner may have no further trouble thereby, and that the Security given by the Petitioner for obtaining his Liberty be vacated, as also that your Majesty do expresse your resentment towards Sir Henry Morgan and Thomas Martin, in such manner as your Majesty in your Royall wisdom may deem most meet for the discouragement of persons in like power from exercising such hardships upon your subjects and Contemning the Dignity of your Council Board. And inasmuch as it is alleaged that the Petitioner has suffered deeply by the said imprisonment Wee do further humbly offer that your Majesty should declare your pleasure that the Petitioner be left to take such remedy for the same by Course of law as he shall think fit.” (PC 2/69/267)

That language is quite remarkable. Morgan’s, Martin’s, and Governor Carlisle’s attempts to justify their actions, with which the record is replete and which, at times, seem almost plausible, must be viewed in the light of the conclusions that the PC, which would not seem to have had any particular reason to favor Mingham, reached.

However, a diligent search by the Enquiry staff at TNA could not locate such a reference number or the corresponding documents. It is possible that Smith in his notes confused Axtell v Clarke with Axtell v Bonfils (JAM_1725_00), the petition and appeal for the latter being at TNA at PC 1/58/2A

Appellant's case Case of the appellant (Catherine Mansfield v Thomas Bontein)
Case of the Commissioners for Victualing His Majesty's Navy, relating to several large quantities of wine and brandy . . . , with an Appendix: "Being an Abstract of Several Acts of Trade and Navigation; and Copy of His Majesty's Order in Council of the 24th
December 1740"

Counsel D. Ryder; W. Murray

D. Ryder; W. Murray

Note It is unclear whether the Appendix belongs with the Commissioners' printed case or with that of the Respondents, as the person who arranged the pamphlets in their current volume seems to suggest. It is signed by one Temple Stanyan, who does not seem to have been of counsel to anyone in the case. Perhaps it might be analogized to the modern joint appendix, because the text of the Navigation Acts and of the Order in Council are relevant to both cases.

ADDITIONAL RESEARCH

The complexities of these cases and of the two closely related cases, Bradley v Bontein (JAM_1743_02) and Bennett v Bontein (JAM_1743_03), are considerable, but the underlying issue is clear enough. On 24 Dec. 1740, the Privy Council issued an order exempting from the Navigation Acts imports of provisions for the fleet and forces in Jamaica. (For the maneuverings within the government with regard to this order, in which Archibald Bontein and Governor Trelawney are mentioned, see APC v.3 [490].) Bontein, the deputy naval officer in Jamaica, apparently with backing from Mathew Concanen, the advocate-general of Jamaica, and Governor Trelawney, seems to have taken the position that only an act of parliament could override another act of parliament. In any case, Bontein seized three ships, the King's Meadow (Mansfield v Concanen), the Dolphin (Bradley v Bontein), and the Mercury

(Bennett v Bontein), all of which, their owners subsequently alleged, were carrying provisions for the fleet. John Gray and Benjamin Maynard, merchants of the notorious Port Royal in Jamaica, claimed, as agents of the Commissioners for the Victualling of His Majesty's Navy, possession of the cargo of the ships, which Bontein had also seized. Bontein was supported by the courts in Jamaica; and the owners, and Gray and Maynard, took their appeals to the Privy Council.

In the meantime (on 2 Feb. 1742), the commissioners had filed with the Privy Council what are called memoranda, which later were reformulated as a petition or a complaint to the Council, in which they outlined the legal position apparently taken by Bontein and asked whether they should seek redress in parliament or whether the Privy Council should order Bontein to desist. The Council did neither, but referred the matter to "the Duke of Newcastle's office from whence the said Papers came," a reference, presumably, to Newcastle in his capacity as Secretary of State.

Once the appeals arrived, the Privy Council could not ignore them, though the record raises the question of whether the jurisdiction actually lay in the Admiralty. Eventually (in 1748), the Committee heard all the appeals, with results quite favorable to the appellants, as indicated in the reports of the cases.

The clearest indication of what the cases, and who the parties, were is found in the style of the printed case of respondents:

Thomas Mansfield, late Master or Commander of the Ship King's Meadow, alias the Cork Galley, alias the Young Catharine, alias Lamosa Catalina, in Behalf of Himself and of George Fitzgerald of London, Merchant, and others, Owners of the said Ship } Appellant. His Majesty's Advocate-General of the Island of Jamaica [Mathew Concanen], and Thomas Bontein Esquire, Naval-Officer of the said Island } Respondents.

John Gray and Benjamin Maynard, Agents to the Commissioners for Victualling his Majesty's Forces and Navy in America, in an action of Trover touching the above Ships } Plaintiffs in Error and Appellants. The said Thomas Bontein, who as well for his Majesty, and his Excellency Edward Trelawney, Esquire, Governor of the said Island, as for himself in this Behalf, prosecutes } Defendant in Error, and Respondent.

Henry Bradley, late Master of the Ship Dolphin, and the said John Gray and Benjamin Maynard, } Plaintiffs in Error, and Appellants. The said Thomas Bontein, who as well, &c. } Defendant in Error and Respondent.

John Bennett, late Master of the Ship Mercury, and the said John Gray and Benjamin Maynard, } Plaintiffs in Error, and Appellants. The said Thomas Bontein, who as well, &c. } Defendant in Error and Respondent.

Stephen Bisse, Thomas Revell, Thomas Brerton, William Thompson, William Hay,

Thomas Tresusis, and Richard Hall, Esquires, Commissioners for Victualling his Majesty's Navy } Petitioners and Complainants. His Excellency Edward Trelawney, Esquire, and the said Thomas Bontein } Respondents. [This following entry is in much larger type:]

The CASE of his Excellency Edward Trelawney, Esquire, one of the Respondents to the last-mentioned Petition; and of his Majesty's Advocate-General of the said Island of Jamaica, one of the Respondents to the first-mentioned Appeal, and of Thomas Bontein, Esquire, Respondent to the said Petition, and to all the above-mentioned Appeals.

It will be noted that the actions involving the ships under the Navigation Acts were qui tam actions. Bontein and Trelawney were not simply doing their duty as they understood it. The final case before the Privy Council about this matter, Bontein v Trelawney (JAM_1753_02), deals with the settling of accounts between the two, the details of which need not concern us here.

ADDITIONAL RESEARCH

The appellant is probably David Olyphant (d. 1770), whose claim to the ancient Scottish peerage of Oliphant is usually regarded as spurious. See Complete Peerage 1st ed., 1895, 6:122 note e; Legacies of British Slave-ownership, s.n. Rt Hon. David Olyphant soi-disant Baron of Scotland. The Wikipedia article ‘Lord Oliphant’, however, seems to regard the claim as genuine: “David Oliphant, 6th of Bachilton, known as 12th but more correctly 1st (fourth creation [dated from 1757]) Lord Oliphant (d. 1770),” although with some qualifications in the main body of the article.

The referral to the Committee, under the entries for 9 Aug. 1751, styles Olyphant as “the Right Hon. David Lord Oliphant.” The Committee Report tells us that the case was originally filed on 12 July 1744 in the Court of Chancery of Jamaica by Edward Manning “against the Petitioner by his then Stile and Addition of David Olyphant of the Parish of Clarendon in Jamaica Esq.” These entries suggest that Olyphant was claiming the barony as early as 1751. It is normally thought that he did not claim it until at least 1757. Legacies of British Slave-ownership would seem to have it right.

Olyphant is almost certainly the respondent in JAM_1748_05, in which judgment was not rendered until 1753. He made no appearance in that case, however, so we do not know how he was styling himself. The petitioner did not mention any noble title.

Disposition

Notes

John Bourke's name is spelled 'Burke' in the printed case filed on his behalf. The fact that Yorke and Forrester represent the respondent in Molesworth v Fearon and the appellant in Peters v Bourke suggests, as is in fact the case, that the issues involved in the two cases are quite different despite the overlapping parties.

Vessels*Diamond* (sloop)Description

Condemnation.

Disposition

Appeal dismissed.

Notes

We have changed the case name from what appears in the APC on the basis of the printed cases. The appellant's printed cases styles the respondents as Innes ex rel. Donaldson and does not mention Governor Lyttleton as a party. The respondent's printed case adds that Israel is appealing on behalf of himself and Sill as co-owners of the Diamond, does not mention that Innes sued ex rel. Donaldson, but adds Governor Lyttleton as a party respondent.

For clarity, the names of the participants enumerated in the printed cases are added to Participants here even though they are not mentioned in the APC.

ADDITIONAL RESEARCH

The APC incorrectly states that Grace's dower, which it correctly describes as an annuity in lieu of dower, would have come from the estate of John Gardner. According to the committee report, however, it would have come from the estate of Thomas Gardner, Grace's late husband. As the report phrases it, the case concerned: "an Agreement entered into, between the said John Gardner deceased, and the said Grace, for Payment of a certain Annuity to her in lieu of Dower, out of the Estate of Thomas Gardner deceased." The relationship between John and Thomas is not stated. John was probably Thomas's executor, perhaps his brother as well. See Additional Research on ANT_1726_03.

Description

Disposition

Notes

According to entries in the Privy Council's register, Quasheba (aka Queen) was a "Negro woman slave" and the mother of six sons of George Williams. Fanny Douglas, a "mulatto woman slave," was the mother of another son. The status of Jenny Webb is not given. The unfortunate outcome in this case may explain the 1783 Private Act by Martin Williams, likely brother of George Williams, to have his children by Eleanor Williams, a "free Negro woman," given the "rights and privileges of English subjects under certain restrictions." See the Table of Private Acts in Jamaica Laws, 1760–1792.

Catterall, Judicial Cases Concerning Slavery, 5:352–353, has a summary of the arguments in Grant, Jamaica Cases (see Other Documents).

Notes

The seeming discrepancy between the listing of the colonial courts and the dates of the proceedings given in the APC and those given in Grant's report (below, Documentation) merits further exploration in the latter.

Fuller names for the appellants are as follows: Anna Eliza Gamon Elletson Brydges, Duchess of Chandos; James Brydges, 3rd Duke of Chandos. For further information see Linda L. Sturtz, “The ‘Dimduke’ and the Duchess of Chandos: Gender and Power in Jamaican Plantation Management – A Case Study or, A Different Story of ‘A Man [and his wife] from a place called Hope’,” available online.

As noted in the Introduction, many names of enslaved persons appear in the underlying documentation of the PC cases. This one has a particularly full list that appears in PC 2/128/368–369, which we transcribe here preserving the original capitalization and punctuation: “That in August Grand Court 1781, the said Walrond Fearon and Mary his wife also brought an Action in replevin against the Appellants for the following Negro and other Slaves to wit Old Tony My Lord Pera, Boatswain Quamina Oxford Little Wackey Perington Whancka’s Roger Bob Crockatt Emanuel Jessamine Guy Monimia Tony Juba’s Robert Moll’s Will Wiltshire, Primus Jemsay Franky’s Quashee Benebas Cudjoe Phebes Jone Maron’s Cudjoe Cuba’s Harry Billy Thomas Cooper Cuffee Cooper Pompey Catalin’s Ralph Simpey Davey Pshyees Charles Smith Tom Dublin Sambo Will Toby Kingo Doctor Harvey Coachman Roger Philip Charles Marina Black Amba Lynda Lydda Hora Angola’s Sarah Mingos Juba, Coromantine Daphne Frankey Jack’s Amba Dicks Cuba Nanny Tilly Cretia Kate’s Rose Charitys Moll Sappho Roses Charity Old Amber’s Maria Case’s Phyche Juba’s Yabba Judy’s Catalina Franky’s Rose Spike’s Juba Little Medgey Nennios, Barbary Juba’s Polly Catalins Batty Amey Phebe’s Franky Long Phebe’s Cynthia Mary Venus Jenny Physche’s Physche Franky Juno Juba Hope’s Abbah Dolly Esther Cuba’s Bella Hagar Betty Pierce, Little Bess Sally Hitty Molly Nago Chloe My Lords Rose and Franky to which Action in Replevin the Appellants also appeared and pleaded not Guilty –”

Disposition

Notes

The APC lists this under Antigua, but it is clear that the case belongs in this colony. The lead petitioner in the case came from Antigua, and the first entry in the PC register labels the case Antigua and says that the court appealed from was the Chancery Court of Antigua. That is highly unlikely, since the decedent whose estate is the subject of the proceedings came from Montserrat. Subsequent entries in the PC register label the case as Montserrat and say, as the APC points out, that the court appealed from was the Chancery Court of Montserrat. The date given for the order appealed from is 6 October 1740 and the names of the participants in the subsequent entries match those in the first one, so there is little doubt that we are dealing with the same case.

Notes

The APC and PC 2 say that both court decisions took place in 1767. However, the January decision reverses the May decision, so at least one of the dates is incorrect.

It is not known if this James Doran is the same James Doran who in 1757 bought and then sold Olaudah Equiano, famous for his autobiography, The Interesting Narrative of the Life of Olaudah Equiano.

Library British Library: (Hardwicke Papers) Additional Manuscripts 15491 f.11–15 (Manuscript catalogued by the BL as “Brief of a case between Lieut Col Gabriel Christie, Appt, and Francis N Knipe and John Le Quesne, respts, at Quebec, 1766.” It is said to be found on f.11–15, but there are only nine images. It is hard to tell from the images what is recto and what is verso, but the image that follows the dorse of the document is clearly marked as f.16[r]. It is possible that f.11r is blank and not photographed, or that the foliation, which is modern, was expanded to accommodate the insertion of a document with an uneven number of pages. What we have seems to be complete. The first image is entitled “Petition of the appellant,” and that seems to be what it is. The dorse of the last image, however, describes the document as the brief of the appellant. It is attested by Yorke and Norton and may have served as an appendix to their printed case) view

Smith v Jarvis – Report No. ANT_1738_02 (APC, v.3 [447] p.615–616).

Not indexed as an appeal. Petition is for a writ of error and an appeal if necessary. The background for this appeal is given in the two related cases, particularly in the printed cases and PC 1 documents that are listed in ANT_1736_01.

The margin note for this action in the APC is “Leeward Islands,” but the Privy Council register makes clear that the island is St. Christopher.

Description

Disposition

Affirmed with costs.

Notes

The parties are grouped in the heading of the appellant's printed case in order to indicate the capacity in which they are suing. This arrangement results in duplicating names where the same person is suing in more than one capacity. It also makes reasonably clear that John Mills, esq., and John Mills, merchant, were not the same person. Here Thomas Mills is not listed as a merchant, although the APC describes the guardians of Peter Mathew as "The said Thomas Mills and John Mills Merchants."

List of Appeals by Short Case Name, Colony, and Date

The date is the date of the first mention in the Acts of the Privy Council, Colonial Series. The case name is linked to the report that contains the case. Alphabetization ignores the prefix. Hence, a case name beginning 'Appeal of' will be found under the surname of the appellant, and one beginning 'In re The' will be found under the name of the vessel. Appeals with alternate names are listed under both names.

Vessels Named in Appeals

Alphabetization is by vessel name ignoring the prefix 'HMS'. The case names are linked to the report in which they appear. All the case names associated with a given report are listed, but the vessel in question may not be involved in all the cases. Year reflects the first mention in the Acts of the Privy Council, Colonial Series. Four of the vessel names appear only in the Introduction and not in the reports. Three unnamed vessels appear at the bottom of the list.

List of Signatories on Printed Cases

The list is alphabetical by surname. Square brackets in the name indicate what we have supplied, parentheses alternate spellings. Following the given name in parentheses are the given name(s) found on the printed cases. Following that in square brackets is the name that we assigned to the signatory in Part I. Underneath, in many cases is a brief note on the person and/or the name, including references to the ODNB when the person is listed there. These elements are followed by the names of the cases that they signed (linked to the report), the colony, and the year in which the case began in the Privy Council. The primary sort is by year.

References to Enslaved Persons in the *Acts of the Privy Council, Colonial Series (Part 1)

This list parallels the list for Part 2, Caribbean and Canada. This list records six cases that mention enslaved persons in the APC abstract. Two individuals are mentioned by name: Betty and Mariah. The APC abstracts use the words ‘slave’ and ‘negro’ variously spelled: Slave(s) or slave(s); Negro(s) or Negroe(s); negro(s) and negroe(s). When quoting from the APC, the editors use the spelling of the APC.

11_1721_01 – Owen, appeal of : “for the freight of 134 negroes” (APC abstract)

12_1699_00 – Peers v Amory: cargo included “Negro slaves” (APC abstract)

13_1759_02 – Burwell v Johnson: “. . . for an account of the slaves belonging or due to James Bray at his death, and for the delivery of the said slaves.” (APC abstract)

13_1760_00 – Tabb v Edmundson: “The names and values of twelve negro slaves are also given. Five men average 44 pounds, five women 40 pounds, and two boys 18 pounds.” (APC abstract)

13_1768_01 – Dixon v Turner: “. . . and two slaves, Mariah and Betty.”(APC abstract)

In addition, we know of at least five appeals in which enslaved persons were mentioned in related materials. Further study of the printed cases and the Privy Council register and associated records may expand this list. We include these cases as examples of documents in which such information can be discovered.

08_1685_00 – Billop v West: action involved the alleged illegal seizure of slaves (CSP)

11_1746_02 – Vanbrugh v Powers: account issue involving Indian slaves (Bilder, Salamanders and Sons of God, p.297)

13_1736_00 – Burges v Hack: dispute involved slaves and land (printed case)

13_1763_02 – Steuart v Buchanan: dispute involved slaves and land (Committee report)

13_1765_02 – Wilson v Darrell: dispute involved slaves (petition)

References to Enslaved Persons
in the *Acts of the Privy Council, Colonial Series (Part 2)

APC abstracts that mention enslaved persons are listed here. They are not necessarily mentioned in the reports. This list does not capture mention in other documents. Further study of the printed cases and the registers will definitely expand the list. For an example, see the Notes to JAM_1783_01.

The APC uses the words ‘slave’ and ‘negro’ variously spelled: Slave(s) or slave(s); Negro(s) or Negroe(s); negro(s) and negroe(s). In the reports, the editors use the spelling of the APC when quoting from the APC. When not quoting, we use the term the APC used in the abstract but with the following spellings: slave(s) and Negro(es).

References to Plantations or Land in the *Acts of the Privy Council, Colonial Series (Part 2)

This list records appeals with APC abstracts that mention plantations or land. Because the abstracts cannot be searched from the main search page, the list was created by hand to aid researchers. This list does not capture mention in other documents. Further study of the printed cases and the Privy Council register and associated records will definitely expand this list.

In the case of multiple appeals, only the first appeal within a case report number is listed. The quoted language comes from the APC abstract, that may in some instances represent multiple iterations of the case.

One abstract of a Canadian appeal involves land: Eleazer Levy v Ralph Burton (revived by Robert Burton), Daniel Disney, Daniel Robertson and William Jones, QUE_1768_00 (“forcibly his house in Montreal”). Another relates to water rights: Conrad Guky v François le Maître Dueme, QUE_1781_00 (“navigation of the great river Machiche by erecting a mill dam in the bed”).

Notes on Index

A complete Index of the persons and, to some extent, the places, in Part 2 may be found online at https://amesfoundation.law.harvard.edu/ColonialAppeals/CaribAppeals/ppi_caribcan_mysql.php. It contains more than 4000 entries and cannot be accommodated within the covers of one volume. The online version also links the entries in the Index to the participants' lists in the reports and vice versa, something that cannot be done in a printed volume. The Index greatly enhances the value of the reports, and we would urge our readers to use it, even if they normally do not use websites for research purposes.
